

Powerful Simplicity Flow of Points of View 6

Living as the natural state cannot be difficult; otherwise, it wouldn't be the natural state. And just like the brilliance of the sun is happening totally effortlessly, the sun doesn't contrive its warmth and brilliance, we don't have to contrive our warmth and brilliance.

Nature's intelligence is without effort. The planets and stars don't work to be in place. Our bodies don't effort to do their thing. If we look at it by analyzing everything and putting it into segments, then there seems to be a lot going on there, and we attribute lots of causes and effects, but the more we rest as that great simplicity of the wisdom body we see that all complexities are soaked in that simplicity, and we can solve any miracle by abiding as that simplicity.

It's really that simple. In understanding that all that appears has two aspects, a label and awareness. That's all. That's all we ever need to know, and when we are all caught up in the label, all we do is we recognize the simplicity of the second aspect.